

Peter P. Swire

Peter P. Swire is the C. William O'Neill Professor of Law at the Moritz College of Law of the Ohio State University and a Senior Fellow at the Center for American Progress. He has been a leader in privacy, cybersecurity, and the law of cyberspace, as a scholar, government official, and participant in numerous policy, public interest, and business settings.

From 1999 to early 2001 Professor Swire served as the Clinton Administration's Chief Counselor for Privacy, in the U.S. Office of Management and Budget. In that position, he coordinated Administration policy on the use of personal information in the public and private sectors, and served as point of contact with privacy and data protection officials in other countries. Among other activities, he chaired the White House Working Group on Encryption in the process that led to a major change in U.S. encryption policy in September, 1999.

From 2009 until August, 2010 Professor Swire was Special Assistant to the President for Economic Policy, serving in the National Economic Council under Lawrence Summers. In that role, he worked extensively on issues arising from the housing crisis. For a period, he was also the lead person at the NEC on technology issues, including broadband, spectrum, privacy, cybersecurity, and net neutrality. During the Obama-Biden Transition, his responsibilities included acting as counsel to the Obama New Media Team, and he assisted on Federal Trade Commission and Federal Communications Commission transition activities.

Professor Swire is lead author of Information Privacy: Official Reference for the Certified Information Privacy Professional. With Jonathan Zittrain, he is editor of the Cyberspace Law Abstracts of the SSRN. Many of his writings appear at www.peterswire.net.

Professor Swire graduated summa cum laude from Princeton University and in law school was a Senior Editor of the Yale Law Journal.
