

Constitutional Process
Fall 2009
Professor David Franklin
First-Day Reading Assignment

The casebook for this course is Stone, Seidman, Sunstein, Tushnet, and Karlan, Constitutional Law (6th ed. 2009). There is also a photocopied handout of more than 100 pages in length, which will be available on the law school web site and in hard copy from faculty clerk Lawrence Arendt (7th floor South; take a right from the elevators). The reading for our first class (Monday, August 24) is casebook pages xliii-lviii (The United States Constitution); casebook pages 1-29; handout pages 1-6; and casebook pages 29-36. This last section, pages 29-36, is the very difficult and complicated case of Marbury v. Madison, so be sure to leave ample time for reading it.
